Allowable Subject Matter

1. Claims 1,6,8-14,19,21-26 allowed.
2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: Prior art shows a permanent magnet rotor positioning and retaining device comprising: a sleeve having a tubular structure, a rotor iron core shaped as a round steel pole made of stack steel plates (stamp fabricated) having a plurality of grooves circumferentially provide inside the sleeve and a shaft hole. Wherein, the trapezoid –shape grooves are capable of fitting closely with the base of the trapezoid protrusion, so that the grooves and the base are engage in sliding fashion. Prior art also discloses, four arc shaped permanent magnets of alternating poles having a cut-off area in the outer perimeter corners of two adjacent permanent magnets; so as to form a near triangle - shaped region between two adjacent permanent magnets. Wherein, the plurality of dividers is between the two adjacent magnets, sleeve, and the rotor iron core. Which is separated from one another by four dividers. The dividers are made of a material having poor or none magnetic conductivity having a base closely engaged with a groove so that the divider are secured the rotor core; a trunk for filling the gap between two adjacent permanent magnets moving in a circumferential direction; a rim having a triangle – shape structure in close contact with the cut-off area so as to prevent the permanents from moving in a radial direction and the rotor core having a plurality of narrow arc- shaped holes circumferentially provide around the shaft.

However prior art fails to show a rotor iron core having a plurality of grooves, wherein the rotor iron core includes a plurality of steel plates stacked together, each plate having a plurality of elevations on one side and a plurality of corresponding depression on an opposite side, the steel plates being stacked one upon another with coincidednt depression so the provide proper orientation.
